

Rebuilding Together Pittsburgh Program: Building Connections

Connecting with homeowners, not just their homes

Building trust with homeowners is at the heart of Rebuilding Together Pittsburgh's work and is essential to a successful home renovation. Through its Building Connections program, RTP builds on the homeowner relationship for deep, human impact on every project. From initial confirmation of a rehab project through 90 days post-completion, RTP staff checks in monthly to answer homeowners' questions and ensure they are comfortable with what is happening in their home.

RTP brings homeowners and resources together

Often, RTP's homeowner clients are not aware that they qualify for other programs. The experienced RTP team unlocks appropriate services and resources – from energy assistance and food security to property tax relief programs and preparation of wills. Custom, individualized support through the Building

Connections program is distinctive to Rebuilding Together Pittsburgh and reflects the organization's commitment to the human side of home renovation.

Improving lives by tapping into resources

In 2020, RTP connected a significant percentage of its clients to support and services they previously were not using:
